

Daniel Tokaji is an Associate Professor of Law at the Ohio State University's Moritz College of Law, where he serves as Associate Director of the Election Law @ Moritz project. His research and scholarship focus on election administration and political equality. Professor Tokaji's recent work includes "The New Vote Denial: Where Election Reform Meets the Voting Rights Act," 57 South Carolina Law Review 689 (2006), "Intent and Its Alternatives: Defending the New Voting Rights Act," 58 Alabama Law Review 349 (2006), "Early Returns on Election Reform: Discretion, Disenfranchisement, and the Help America Vote Act," 73 George Washington Law Review 1206 (2005), and "The Paperless Chase: Electronic Voting and Democratic Values," 73 Fordham Law Review 1711 (2005). Among the other publications in which his scholarship has appeared are the Michigan Law Review and Yale Law Journal. Professor Tokaji's Equal Vote blog provides analysis and commentary on developments in the area of election reform and voting rights. He earned his J.D. in 1994 from Yale Law School, where he was an editor of the Yale Law Journal. He graduated summa cum laude from Harvard College in 1989.